A clearer picture of your stay.

Founded by Swiss entrepreneur Abdullah Boulad, COGNIFUL brings Swiss roots and international expertise to personal care, with privacy and discretion. Explore Premier and Premier Plus, the individual care and shared residence, clinical suitability, fees, and the steps toward admission.

Your individual assessment and written proposal determine the actual plan. A general description cannot confirm admission, a particular clinician, or an identical schedule for every client.

Your proposal confirms the program, residence, clinical input, duration, inclusions, payment terms, and any additional costs.

Care begins with your actual needs.

In Mallorca and Zurich, COGNIFUL considers mental health, addiction, trauma and co-occurring needs where the residential setting is suitable. The London program focuses on mental health.

01

Mental health

The website describes residential care for depression and anxiety, with an individual clinical review before admission.

02

Addiction

Published treatment areas include alcohol, cocaine, cannabis, and prescription-medication concerns.

03

Trauma and PTSD

Assessment considers suitability, privacy, the proposed approach, and an appropriate pace of care.

04

Co-occurring needs

Mental health, substance use, and trauma-related concerns are considered together where they overlap.

Explore: Treatment overview / cogniful.clinic

Assessment comes before admission.

The review considers what you need now, what has already been tried, and whether the shared residential setting can provide appropriate support.

01

Current concerns

Describe symptoms, everyday functioning, immediate difficulties, and what brings you to treatment.

02

Health and treatment history

Share relevant physical health information, previous care, current clinicians, and your medication history.

03

Substance use and withdrawal

Include alcohol, non-prescribed substances, actual medication use, and possible withdrawal needs.

04

Safety and the right setting

Clinical needs determine whether this residence is suitable or whether another level of care is needed first.

Medical detoxification, acute psychiatric care, or another level of support may need to come first. An admissions inquiry is not an emergency assessment; urgent concerns require local medical help.

A plan that connects treatment with daily life.

The purpose of the stay is not simply to fill a timetable. Assessment, individual care, progress review, and preparation for home should form a coherent plan.

01 Understand

Bring together current concerns, treatment history, relevant health information, and personal priorities.

02 Plan

Clarify treatment goals, proposed clinical input, practical support, and how progress will be reviewed.

03 Engage

Premier combines individual clinical treatment and bodywork with shared holistic sessions and activities. Premier Plus delivers all sessions and activities individually.

04 Prepare for home

Both programs include planning for home. Premier Plus includes three months of structured aftercare after the residential stay.

The plan can be reviewed as needs and circumstances become clearer. Specific treatment methods and session frequency are confirmed in your proposal.

A shared clinical team. Clear individual responsibility.

COGNIFUL shares its clinical team with THE BALANCE. The professionals involved in your stay depend on assessment and the agreed plan.

01

Clinical direction

Ask who will lead your care and how the priorities for treatment are agreed and reviewed.

02

Appointments and coordination

Confirm who organizes the proposed appointments and communicates changes to the plan.

03

Support between sessions

Clarify the actual support and escalation arrangements, including outside appointment hours.

04

A coordinated handoff

With appropriate authorization, identify how existing clinicians and agreed family contacts will contribute to continuity.

Your own space, within a small residence.

Photographs in this guide show Mallorca.

Each client has a private suite in a shared residence for up to four clients. COGNIFUL occupies a separate property from THE BALANCE.

The exact residence, room, and practical arrangements are confirmed before arrival. Tell admissions about requirements that affect comfort, accessibility, privacy, or participation.

Structure without a fixed schedule.

A day follows the individual care plan. These elements illustrate possibilities, not guaranteed times, appointments, or a compulsory sequence.

01 Start the day

Personal routine, breakfast, and preparation for agreed appointments.

02 Individual care

Individual clinical or bodywork sessions according to your personal plan.

03 Meals and a pause

Meals in the shared residence and time to pause between appointments.

04 Your program activities

Premier: shared holistic sessions and activities. Premier Plus: all sessions and activities individual.

05 Personal time

Space for reflection, quiet activity, and private rest.

06 Plan the next steps

Clarify forthcoming appointments, changes to the schedule, and priorities for continuing care.

The mix and frequency of sessions vary with clinical needs. Confirm phone use, work commitments, visitors, and practical expectations with admissions.

Prepare the essentials. Reduce avoidable uncertainty.

Clinical approval, availability, and the written proposal should be clear before you rely on a travel plan.

01 Confirm your admission

Check the agreed dates, residence, suite, proposed duration, and arrival instructions.

02 Organize clinical information

Ask which records, medication details, and existing-clinician contacts are needed and how to share them securely.

03 Discuss medication continuity

Clarify prescriptions, exact products, actual use, and any travel-related arrangements with the relevant professionals. Do not change medication to prepare for admission.

04 Explain practical requirements

Raise dietary needs, allergies, accessibility or sensory requirements, and essential communication commitments.

05 Agree on responsibilities

Confirm payment terms, travel arrangements, key contacts, and who should be informed if your circumstances change.

Report significant changes in health or treatment before traveling. Do not postpone urgent medical care while waiting for an admissions response.

Explore: Your first days / cogniful.clinic

Get oriented. Understand the plan.

The first days should help you understand the residence, the next appointments, and how to ask for support. They are not a test of how quickly you can appear settled.

01 Know the right contacts

Identify your practical contact, clinical point of contact, and the route for an urgent concern.

02 Review the essentials

Make sure the relevant professionals have an accurate medication and recent-treatment history.

03 Understand private and shared space

Clarify your room, common areas, meals, activities, and expectations around privacy.

04 Ask about the initial priorities

Understand what the plan is trying to achieve and how appointments relate to your needs.

05 Confirm the next steps

Know the forthcoming appointments and how schedule changes or concerns will be communicated.

An initial timetable is not a promise of identical appointments for every client. The plan may change after further clinical discussion.

Clear expectations make the stay easier to understand.

Privacy and discretion guide our approach to care. Personal clinical information, everyday shared living, and contact with people at home are different questions. Discuss each explicitly.

Within the residence

- Clinical consultations and your individual treatment plan remain personal.
- A private suite is not exclusive use of all common areas.
- Respect other residents' names, circumstances, stories, and privacy.
- Raise a problem with the setting through the agreed contact rather than waiting for it to escalate.

Family, devices, and work

- Agree on family communication and any appropriate involvement in care.
- Clarify phone use, visitors, and essential work commitments before relying on an arrangement.
- Identify who may receive information and what authorization is needed.
- Do not assume that paying for treatment grants access to every clinical detail.

Your practical arrangements and clinical needs determine what is appropriate. This guide does not promise unrestricted remote work, visiting, or phone access.

Explore: Your first days / cogniful.clinic

You can begin with a conversation.

Photographs in this guide show Mallorca.

A family member or loved one can contact admissions to explain concerns and ask about either program. You do not need a diagnosis or a complete treatment plan to begin.

Family involvement follows the client's authorization and clinical needs. Premier Plus includes individual sessions and activities and three months of structured aftercare. Any family work is agreed as part of the care plan.

Explore: Information for families / cogniful.clinic

Usually 4-12 weeks. Reviewed individually.

The published typical stay is a starting point for discussion, not a guarantee that every person needs the same length of treatment.

01

Clarify the purpose

Discuss what the proposed residential stay is intended to add to your current care.

02

Review the experience

Describe symptoms, functioning, participation, practical barriers, and questions about the approach.

03

Revisit the plan

Ask how goals, appointments, or support may change as new information emerges.

04

Prepare the transition

Connect readiness to leave with the practical and clinical arrangements for the next stage.

Confirm any extension, revised fee, or change in scope through the individual proposal and the relevant clinical review. Duration is not a promised recovery outcome.

Make the practical agreement explicit.

Programs are generally self-pay, and COGNIFUL does not work directly with insurers. You pay first; relevant documentation can support a reimbursement request, but payment by an insurer is not guaranteed.

01

Your program and care

Confirm Premier or Premier Plus, your suite, treatment plan, and recommended duration.

02

The full financial picture

Check the weekly and total fees, payment dates, inclusions, and possible additional charges.

03

Changes or cancellation

Read the cancellation terms and what happens if the plan, dates, or length of stay changes.

04

Insurance questions

Check your own policy and insurer's requirements. Do not treat available documentation as a promise of reimbursement.

05

What remains unresolved

Ask for clear written answers before committing to travel or payment on an assumption.

Explore: Fees and admissions / cogniful.clinic

Four steps toward a considered start.

01 Talk with admissions

Explain the situation, say who the inquiry is for, and ask your initial questions about care, the residence, and fees.

02 Complete the clinical review

Provide the requested information about current needs, health, treatment history, medication, and substance use.

03 Review your individual proposal

Confirm the chosen program, care, residence, duration, fees, inclusions, and continuing-care arrangements.

04 Prepare for arrival

Agree on dates, consent, payment, travel arrangements, and what to expect in the residence.

An inquiry is not a diagnosis or confirmation of admission. Clinical suitability and availability determine the next step.
